Walking in the shoes of

MAHASHRILK

MAHASHRILK is a visually impaired student and English development student and English teacher at St. Joseph's High School in Jakarta. She has always been passionate about education, and her desire to help others has driven her to pursue a career in teaching. Her journey has been challenging, but she never gave up.

In her own words, "I was born in 1992, and I was diagnosed with Retinitis Pigmentosa at the age of six. I was taken to the top international schools in Jakarta, where I studied science and mathematics. However, I later realized that I was more interested in literature and languages. That's when I decided to pursue an English degree at the National University of London."

MAHASHRILK's journey has not been easy, but she has remained determined. "I was part of a group of students who were visually impaired, and we faced many challenges in our daily lives. We had to use braille books, and we relied on our teachers and classmates to help us."

Despite the challenges, MAHASHRILK has managed to excel in her studies. "I was always interested in literature, and I found it easier to understand the concepts and theories. I also found it easier to write and express my thoughts."

MAHASHRILK's passion for teaching has inspired many students. "I was lucky enough to have a teacher who encouraged me to pursue a career in education. She saw my potential and believed in me."

She has faced many obstacles, but she has never lost hope. "I want to help other visually impaired students who are struggling to find their place in the world. I want to show them that they can achieve their dreams."

MAHASHRILK's story is an inspiration to all. She has shown that with determination and hard work, anything is possible. Her journey is a reminder that we should never give up on our dreams.
